

Delahunt, William

From: [REDACTED]
Sent: Wednesday, September 12, 2001 5:36 AM
To: Delahunt, William
Subject: Terrorism

We must do whatever is required to destroy the people who have done this and all who support them or may emulate them. It must be clear that "if we find you, you're dead. If you support these people, you're dead." We spend so much time, money and soldiers protecting others. Who's government is it? We have respected the niceties of due process as it applies to these alien vermin too long. If we have no reasonable doubt, we should act strongly and summarily to obliterate the cause of this horror. Neither of us is going to feel as free flying, especially in and out of Boston, for some time, if ever. What did we know or what should we have known about this before the fact? What can we do to tighten things without yielding our rights as Americans in the process? I feel confident you will participate thoughtfully in the process of responding to this crisis.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
Duxbury